

Youth ChooZe

doors to enter the labour market

Y and Z generations, improvisation, communication, employability

The labour market is dynamically changing, new needs and structure appeared. Y and Z generations are facing different challenges nowadays when entering the labour market. Self-initiative, creativity and flexibility have become extremely important. People engaged with the NGO sector or small businesses work individually as project based freelancers or in very small teams (3-5 persons) sharing tasks and responsibilities. Networking and equal partnership are decisive elements of co-working in commonly shared offices.

The aim of Youth ChooZe is to train the communication skills of youth workers and empower them to increase the chances of employment of young people.

To achieve this, we set the following objectives:

to develop communication skills through applied improvisation

increase the capacity of youth workers by enriching their toolkit and offering innovative activities which better respond to the needs of unemployed youth in their countries

---

to provide space for sharing best practices focusing on employability skills

---

to introduce Youth Pass as a tool for self-assessment, evaluation and recognition of non-formal learning

Who is this course for?

This course is for youth workers, educators, trainers, mentors, coaches, members and leaders of organizations and communities, who work with groups and teams of young people.

What will we do?

We will train communication skills through applied improvisation: active listening, observation, body language, the use of physical space and voice, sensing others, creating and maintaining connection in communication, practicing different communication styles, forming your message and getting it through, communication in a team. We will focus on the characteristics of the communication of Y and Z generations and will put it into the context of employability.

We will also explore employability skills: matching strengths with interests, improving sense of initiative and creativity, enhancing networking, reading comprehension of job ads, writing and tailoring CV & cover letter, designing creative CVs, acting on a job interview, learning about social entrepreneurship and much more. We will also provide space for sharing tools and methods that foster the conscious choice of youth how to get engaged with the labour market.
